SCHENCK'S MANDRAKE PILLS,

Now then, and other preparations of mercury, do terribly produce more suffering and death than the disease which they promise to cure. Ask you this corrective universe; as demonstrated by the allopathic doctors, is prescribed by them almost universally in Liver complaint, Consumption or the Ague, &c.

THE MANDRAKE PILLS

are composed entirely of roots and herbs, obtained from the great storehouse of Nature, and their action upon the system will appear as soon as the medicine is brought in the test of a few experiments. SCHENCK'S MANDRAKE PILLS do not produce any nausea or sickness of the stomach; but when given for Dyspepsia, will be found to cure them in a surprising way. SCHENCK'S SEAWEED TONIC. By this judicious treatment the digestive faculties are speedily restored to their full vigor, and the worst cases of Dyspepsia may be cured.

When we reflect that the liver, the largest internal organ of the body, that which is the principal agent in the secretion of the bile, and which, when in a healthy state, is the great purifier of the blood, that it is subject to many disorders, and that when it is diseased, we breathe the whole body corrupt through the blood, it is not surprising that so many diseases arise from this source. For these reasons it is necessary and important for all whose employment does not admit of exercise, or exposure to the open air, to use some medicine to keep the liver in a healthy condition. SCHENCK'S MANDRAKE PILLS are the best medicine in the world for this purpose. They will, in a few doses, restore the liver to a healthy action, when all other cathartics and liver medicines will entirely fail. Those who are subject to sick headache, dizziness, coated tongue, bad taste in the mouth, pain in the side, indigestion, dyspepsia, and all diseases arising from a deranged liver, will find that a few doses of these Pills will relieve them of their troubles. Those who are troubled with worms will find a speedy cure in the use of these Pills. Those who are troubled with Rheumatism, Gout, Erysipelas, Scrofula, Salt Rheum, Ulcers, Boils, Pimples on the face, Fever and Ague, Jaundice, Female Irregularities, Piles, Dizziness, Coldness of the Extremities, Pain in the Side, Back and Limbs, Cramps, Spasms, Sour Stomach, Heartburn, Sick Headache, Costiveness, Blotches on the Skin, Impurities of the Blood, and all diseases arising from a disordered Liver or Stomach, such as Diarrhœa, Dysentery, Colic, Bilious Fevers, Inflammation of the Bowels, Fever and Ague, and Intermittent Fevers, Congestion of the Lungs, Pain in the Breast, Hooping Cough, Consumption, and all diseases of the Throat, Lungs and Breast, will find a sure remedy in the use of these Pills. They are the best Pills in the world for all bilious complaints, and a trifling expenditure will prove their value. They are the great strengthening agent in cases of physical debility, whether constitutional or produced by acknowledged medical practitioners, and attested by the most formidable array of testimony that has ever been accumulated in favor of any medicine or medicines.

Fifty years ago, the healthy, as a rule, took alarm with disease against nature. Of course such was not their design, but such was unquestionably their practice. Their intentions were good, but their philosophy and method of treatment were erroneously wrong. Bleeding, vomiting, salivation, violent purgation, and consumption with narcotics, were then the main resources of the profession. The lancet was used freely in intermittent fevers (!) and if the brain was excited, out came the patient's hair, and was supplanted by a comfortable plaster. Calomel and jalap were administered in "heroic doses" in bowel complaint, and the system was saturated with mercury as a specific for liver disease and digestive derangement. This sort of treatment was a source of profit to apothecaries and undertakers, but cruelty to the subjects of it. It brought unnerving tens of thousands, and filled innumerable graves.

The era of violent and indiscriminate depletion has passed away, never, it is hoped, to return, and the true and important of invigoration is generally recognized. But until the introduction of Mandrake's Dutch Bitters neither the public nor the profession knew where to look for a sure and harmless invigorant. For many years the ordinary alcoholic stimulants had been resorted to more and more frequently until careful and conscientious practitioners were afraid to prescribe them, as it was a blessed day for the sick if death when did terminate and so would. Vegetable Tonic was ushered into existence to supply that place. The advent was the great sanitary event of the nineteenth century. The opprobrious epithets of yesterday ago were soon abandoned, but they were bitterly and tongue-tied, that the world and unanswering patients now vended under the name meant to destroy them and to injure both. On the other hand, the effectual employed in the manufacture of the materials—the profession as the front row drilled from the grape of the vine. It is, so to speak, not the blood of the most wholesome of all extracts, stand up. But this admirable preparation is merely the purifier by which the rare medicinal elements of the flowers are conveyed through the system, and the agent by which their active power is developed. The vegetable greatness intermingled with the alcoholic base constitutes the charm of the most potent vegetable bitters ever produced. A combination of genius known to medical history; it was the happy conception of one to their operation, unequaled as it is by the pure vegetable, and the preparation itself a wondrous alliance as a means of regulating, recovering and preventing from deterioration throughout the human system.

Although the medical profession are alive to the value of Mandrake's Bitters as a remedy, and it has been introduced extensively in their private practice, and into many public hospitals and institutions, they do not seem to favor a proper estimate of its importance as a means of diminishing the predisposing causes of disease. For these obstacles that any contrary practice that could be established, would be the use of this antidote by most of this, unfortunately, so fast not yet been offered by the old-school virtue. The mystery is to accept vegetables with important powers. Its properties are to disarm disease of the evil tendencies of its unfavorable circumstances, and by all the processes and modes of diseases which predispose the body to the reception of disease

A LITERARY SUIT.

Publisher versus Authoress—"Wax Material" Serving a Double Purpose.

A Story of the Camp and First Love.

A literary difficulty, involving certain pecuniary considerations and some nice points touching the rights of authors, came before Justice Hollington, at a preliminary hearing, yesterday afternoon. It was the pecuniary question which will make the dispute a somewhat complicated one, and which may at the same time serve to enlighten the reading public upon the mysterious art of book making.

S. M. Kennedy brings a suit against Mrs. S. G. Goodrich, of Chicago, on the charge of $50, which amount he claims to have advanced to her for certain literary services rendered by Mrs. Goodrich's parents. Her late husband, Dr. Goodrich, was a surgeon in the army of the United States, and died at the battle of Murfreesboro. Since that event the widow has been engaged in literary pursuits. She agreed in collecting materials for a book on the late war which it was her intention to publish. She also contributed a variety of sketches, poems, and other matter to various publications, and was, in fact, quite a literary character. Among the periodicals to which she wrote were the Home Circle, for which she wrote several stories, and the Saturday Evening Post, of Philadelphia. "Sorrow and Sympathies, &c., were two works she contributed to the latter journal. At the time of her death she was engaged in the composition of a series of tales entitled "Story of the Camp," which she intended to publish separately in book form. Two weeks ago your orator took a walk over to Mrs. Goodrich's residence, and had an interview with her. Mrs. Goodrich informed him that she had written a book entitled "Wax Material," and that she would like to have it published. She showed your orator a portion of what she terms her "wax material." Your orator was favorably impressed with the appearance of the manuscript, and agreed upon the error of their ways, when he addressed them in a letter which is chiefly remarkable on her account of the fact that it was written by the husband in bodily, an overcrowder, able to afford her family a home. The complainant says that he has been at considerable trouble, and has expended considerable money in the matter, and that he has been put to the expense of a trip to Cincinnati, and that he has been put to the expense of a trip to Cincinnati, and that he has been put to the expense of a trip to Cincinnati
